

The brainstorming focused on two HMW questions that best reflect Sophie’s needs and barriers. The five concepts of the future app. give initial product directions.

HMW	Concept	Concept description	User value for Sophie	Priority
1 How might we position peer-to-peer rental as a simple, desirable and safe way to access exceptional pieces for specific life moments? Reflects Sophie’s core trigger: she comes with a moment to solve. 1&2	 Occasion-First Discovery	An entry point where the user starts with “I have an occasion” and selects event type, date, size, style and budget.	Helps Sophie find the right piece for a specific moment without browsing randomly.	First Priority
	 Complete Look Support	Suggestions around a full outfit: dress, bag, shoes, accessories or similar alternatives for the same occasion.	Helps Sophie feel ready for the full moment, not just rent one isolated item.	Second Priority
	 Fit & Availability Confidence	Clear availability by date, measurements, fit notes, previous renter feedback and size guidance.	Reduces uncertainty before she invests emotionally in an item.	First Priority
2 How might we design a visible trust system that reassures both renters and lenders before, during and after each rental? Reflects Sophie’s main condition for adoption: visible reassurance before commitment.	 Trust-before-booking Layer	A visible trust card showing item condition, cleaning status, owner profile, reviews, deposit and protection rules.	Makes peer-to-peer rental feel serious, safe and credible before commitment.	Nice to Have
	 Service Clarity Before Booking	Clear explanation of rental period, delivery or pick-up, return, cleaning responsibility and what happens if something goes wrong.	Makes the experience predictable and prevents rental from feeling risky or complicated.	Nice to Have
